

Dear FCC, Being an fairly new (and young; I'm 15 ) amateur radio operator, I feel threatened by a hobby that has been nothing less than heaven to me. I have discovered a new world in amateur radio, and your new idea puts that at risk. I would be completely devastated if I lost what has become my hobby, and a good part of my life. I would be very angry if the PLC issue were to happen, and the ham bands would be lost forever. I'm not the only one who objects to this, but I speak of it because ham radio means something to me, and as I said, I would be torn if it were suddenly gone. I spent my life savings on a high-frequency radio, and I would not like it going to nothing. Thanks. Adam, KC2JNW
